

Call for Submissions | The State of Nationalism: An International Review

Submissions are now being accepted for an exciting new resource for the study of nationalism: The State of Nationalism (SoN).

Overview: SoN is a comprehensive, online and open-source guide for the study of nationalism. The guide consists of two key elements: peer-reviewed overviews of key themes in the study of nationalism and a linked, searchable annotated bibliography of sources. This combination makes SoN an invaluable tool for researchers and students in the field. To encourage comparative and theoretically relevant research, the review articles and bibliographies explicitly focus on concepts rather than particular national movements.

You can explore SoN at www.stateofnationalism.eu

Some of our recent and most highly-cited articles include:

- Nation-Building (2021) by Harris Mylonas
- Nationalism and Media (2020) by Michael Skey
- Nationalism and Gender (2018) by Lora Knight
- Nationalism and War (2017) by John Hutchinson
- The Origin of Nationalism (2016) by Atsuko Ichiko
- Everyday Nationalism (2016) by Eleanor Knott

Contribution Instructions: We encourage contributions from both early career and established researchers. Review essays should be approximately 3000 words and should critically describe developments in the literature and indicate whether there are key points of contention and/or differing perspectives, approaches and methods. Annotations for the article's sources should also be concise. All submissions are double blind peer-reviewed, and are jointly published on the SoN portal and in the related journal, Studies on National Movements. For detailed instructions on how you can contribute to SoN, please see: www.stateofnationalism.eu/how-to-contribute/

To submit an article, or if you have any questions, please contact the co-editors Eric Taylor Woods (eric.woods@plymouth.ac.uk) and Robert Schertzer (robert.schertzer@utoronto.ca), or the managing editor Eva Bidania Ibargutxi (editor@stateofnationalism.eu).
